

Oncology Specialist, Sweden

With us, you will work broadly within medical oncology, focusing on breast cancer, melanoma, gastrointestinal cancer, and urological cancer. The department is divided into an outpatient section and a treatment section, giving you a varied working day. Your day may include outpatient visits with approximately 3-4 patients per half-day (new visits, follow-up visits, or toxicity checks), chemotherapy prescriptions, and supervision of junior doctors/residents. We collaborate with a neighbouring region for radiation therapy, allowing you to focus on medical oncology.

We are looking for someone who has:

- Specialist competence in medical oncology or clinical oncology
- At least 5 years of experience in medical or clinical oncology - Experience in one or more of our diagnostic areas (breast cancer, melanoma, gastrointestinal cancer, urological cancer)

The hospital offers:

- Independent work in a well-functioning unit within the Surgical Clinic - Varied tasks with the possibility of supervision - Opportunity to care for the entire region's cancer patients within these diagnostic areas

About the city:

Here, you can have everything close by – both work and leisure. The city has approximately 67,000 inhabitants and is a regional hub offering a perfect location. You don't have to compromise between career and quality of life. Do you want to live near the sea, in the countryside, or in the middle of the city? Everything is possible with short commuting distances. Here, you can live the life you want with proximity to nature, the sea, and a rich community life – without big city stress.
