

Specialist Radiology

Synonyms: Radiologist, Radiology specialist, Radiology doctor, Medical specialist in Radiology

Where?

The positions are divided between three locations in order to provide the best opportunities for the development of competencies. Hence, it is possible to be able to work at several locations depending on the applicant's competencies and wishes. At the three departments of radiology all types of conventional radiology, CT-, MR- and ultra sound scans of all body regions including specialist examinations are performed.

The department receives patients from the hospitals wards, outpatient clinic, primary health care and in some cases from chiropractors as well as citizens, who want to participate in a mammography screening. The radiological departments place their emphasis on being able to give the patients the best possible, up-to-date radiological service. This happens in cooperation with the doctors and departments, who refer the patients to us and with respect for the individual needs of each of our patients.

The departments are a part of qualifying specialist doctors and radiographs. The examination portfolios are different at the three geographical locations.
