

Psychiatrist for Specialised Psychiatric Institution, Limburg, the Netherlands

Clients aged between 18 and 65 are admitted to Kliniek Adults. Admission takes place when an acute psychiatric problem arises that can no longer be treated at home. Admission and treatment take place in the clinic; usually with an average duration of 19 days. There is also an elderly ward, which provides care to clients of at least 65 years old who are placed in the context of a crisis intervention. Most often there is depression, manic, and/or psychotic disorder. In addition, there is a closed ward where clients are mainly treated and nursed in a forced framework. Clients are admitted when there is an acute psychological problem that cannot be treated at home, or can become too great a danger to the individual or their environment. Finally, there is a department that offers help to people with psychiatric problems who are or are at risk of falling into a crisis. The aim is to prevent and shorten crisis and admission to a psychiatric hospital.
